

NEW-YORK DAILY TRIBUNE, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1858.

"W. Badeau, two hundred and seventy-four $6,100 dollars value received.
D. HENRY BURNTINE.
"15 E. 17th."

Indorsed, N. W. Badeau.

Mr. Amerman further alleges that said note became due and was protested for non-payment, whereupon he commenced a suit in the Supreme Court against the said Bartnote and Badeau for the recovery of the amount. Pending said suit, Mr. Badeau testified that the note in question had never been indorsed by him or delivered into possession of said Bartnote. Whereupon Mr. Amerman charges Bartnote with having feloniously forged said indorsement, with the wicked intent to cheat and defraud him of $2,7446.

Mr. Badeau testified that he had examined the note in question and particularly the indorsement thereon, and alighted that the said indorsement is not in his handwriting, although in his name, and that it was never put on said note by him, nor did he ever authorize any person to put his name on said note, and that said note was never in his possession, nor did he ever deliver it to any person.

The magistrate held the accused for examination, which will take place next week. Mr. Badeau resides at Tarrytown and is an important witness in the case.

DISHONEST SERVANT.—Yesterday morning Officer Bennett of the Ninth Precinct arrested an Irish woman named Eliza Maxwell, charged with stealing a purse-matrone containing one pair of gold and canes earrings, a gold bracelet, and a gold chain with a number of charms attached, from Mr. John H. Prime of No. 673 Greenwich street. The property was taken upon a table in the servant parlor, and was taken there from during the temporary absence of Mr. and Mrs. Prime. The parties suspected Eliza, and called in Officer Bunting, who at once accused her of the theft. She denied the charge, but appeared much confused, and walked toward a basket of clothes, which she pretended to take up. Officer Bennett subsequently examined the basket, and under the clothes found the stolen property. The accused was conveyed before Justice Kelly, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, and committed for trial in default of $500. Relative to the charge, Eliza replied: "I have nothing to say, I only found the property lying on the table, and thought I had a right to do as I had a mind to with it."

BROOKLYN ITEMS.

THE MILLEDOLER CASE.—A number of persons interested in this case were around the City Hall yesterday afternoon, before the hour of adjournment. Shortly before that time Mrs. Milledoler, the subject of this proceeding, drove up in a carriage, and with some friends proceeded to the office of Judge Culver. The Judge proceeded to question her as to the facts of the case, and particularly whether she was responsible for her injury. She gave no decisive answer, and almost entirely withdrew into hysteria. An affidavit was made, in pursuance of the statute, that she could not without danger be brought before the Court, and an order issued that the Sheriff take charge of her. Her mother and aunt gave chase, and the fugitives sought refuge in the house of Mr. Daniel Campbell, in Myrtle avenue near Skillman street, Mrs. Campbell's father's former residence in the pursuit, armed with a sword-and-sheath. The chase attracted a large crowd, and several policemen, who contributed materially to the settling of an amanuise, by the terms of which Mr. Milledoler gave up his claim for the present, allowing Mrs. Milledoler to return with her parents, pending the proceedings before Judge Culver.

The afternoon previous an exciting scene took place in connection with this affair in the vicinity of Bedford and Myrtle avenues, where it appears Mrs. Milledoler was staying with an aunt. The husband having discovered her retreat, induced her to go away with him. Her mother and aunt gave chase, and the fugitives sought refuge in the house of Mr. Daniel Campbell, in Myrtle avenue near Skillman street, Mrs. Campbell's father's former residence in the pursuit, armed with a sword-and-sheath. The chase attracted a large crowd, and several policemen, who contributed materially to the settling of an amanuise, by the terms of which Mr. Milledoler gave up his claim for the present, allowing Mrs. Milledoler to return with her parents, pending the proceedings before Judge Culver.
